I'm trying to remember everything I did, but since I didn't have my full mind back until the beginning of 2025 because of the damage the malfunction leadless pacemaker that was leaking electricity did to my nerves, it took time to get my mind back even though it was removed in June 2022 (eight months after it was implanted against my will [I was in an altered mental state and couldn't consent, but it was implanted just because the cardiologist wanted to "play with his new toy"] and I was in the hospital for two and half months where no doctors took me seriously and it took me that long to find who could and would remove it.)

I just wanted to make sure that I gave the information that I had been trying to go after Charlotte L'Juan Ford since October 2023. It's just that nothing in place would actually help me out like they said they are meant to do.

I first called the contractor fraud line of the Calcasieu's Parish Sheriff Office where they laughed when I told them about the situation of my house not being fixed. I was at the Hometowne Studios in Sulphur, Louisiana back then. Then they misinterpreted the law, as I think I said. I did call them again, and they said I needed a police officer and I told them my situation with my health that I couldn't easily just go out and meet an officer at some random time. They didn't want to schedule a time like most people do. They wanted me to be at my house when I called them and this didn't make sense, especially as I told them I didn't have the key and Charlotte needed to give me the key. Why weren't police helpful when told that the key to my property was being held from me?

There was contacting Acadiana legal aid when I was in Leesville and they refused to help.

I did all the requirements for the Calcasieu's Parish Sheriff Office Contractor Fraud Division and as stated, the police were out to my house three times and only contacted Charlotte, not keeping my safety in mind at all. The Contractor Fraud Division had a detective come out and gather information (I've lost his name because that was in my Yahoo! e-mail) and had the complaint for weeks and they denied my case. Then later on, they called me and left a message saying they needed to talk to me about my case, so I called back and I only got threats from Scott Bailey about threatening me via Charlotte's false insistence that I owe her $40,000 and threatening my free speech because on Facebook, before it was hacked, I put that the contractor fraud division is a joke and doesn't do anything. I never said worse than that and I know I have the right to free speech. Somebody on Facebook said that Scott Bailey is a bully.

I think that one link is the record of complaint to the Louisiana D.A.'s office. Again, everything was in my Yahoo! E-mail. (Charlotte obviously did not want me having access to files, but thankfully she didn't get into any of my Google accounts . . . though I don't know she managed getting into my Paypal because I got texted the codes on my phone and wouldn't respond to them or put them in Paypal at all and ignored them like they told me to do).

I don't know how many different lawyers I contacted. I contacted John Fitzgerald. He was deceptive with acting like he was going to take the case on a contingency fee basis as I told him my financial situation, and the how he made me come into his office just to be told that I'd not be able to afford him.

I tried the Legal Eagle team. They sent my information out and the only thing I got back was that my information had been sent to a lawyer in Houston, Texas. Obviously, that doesn't help for a Louisiana breach of contract case. I never got a response from that law firm, not even to give me any recommendations.

I called Brasher law firm, even though I was thoroughly unhappy with Joseph Muckleroy who "handled" the insurance claim for the hurricanes. I sent every document I had to him. He was not ready for the supposed mediation at all. I was given the wrong date, too. I had the date and I got a call asking where I was. I had to hurry and get an Uber because the day that I was called was earlier than the date I was given. I was very careful about keeping the date as at that time, I still had the pacemaker in my heart, so while I was still remembering things, I wanted to be certain to have the date. He had no documents and none of the information I had constantly sent.

I had to keep sending more information to him and to Brasher law firm until the date of the deposition. Brasher law firm never gave me an advance for ALE and, of course, I didn't have any place to live.

The Lake Charles Legal Aid wants $100 for a consultation without even telling me if they actually do breach of contact cases. They want the money upfront and I already paid $150 to John Fitzgeald upfront and I know how that turned out. Any amount is difficult for me to pay since I only get $1000 per month for my bills and the hygiene items and such things that I need and that's because I'm getting early payments from my inheritance from my grandmother in California. My cousin, Amanda, takes care of making sure I get the payments. She's in California, too

I tried Sudduth and Associates, but they at first don't take those cases. They called back and gave me the name of a lawyer there, but that lawyer wants a $200 consultation fee.

I contacted the Ducote law firm. At first, Samuel Ducote said I was right on the nose with everything I had put via the conversation in Gemini and said that he would take the case on a contingency fee basis. Thankfully, he was nice enough to come to my house for a free consultation. However, he promised me an engagement letter within week and I gave him two weeks before contacting his law office again. From that time, I kept calling every week. I think it was a total of five or six weeks and then I get a letter of non-representation from him.

I did contact Meek Ivy Construction and Forrest Ivy came out, but I know he didn't listen to everything I said about the house. I also know he didn't take note of everything that needed to be done and definitely didn't care about my ability to change lightbulbs with one of those extending tools that lets you do it, requiring lights to be open, not covered like they were made in my house (not what I would've chosen at all), nor did he care about me being able to turn off fire alarms (they alarm can be up high, but I need the switch low if that's possible). He also didn't care about cleaning out the ventilation, walls, and ceiling, since there's obviously rat and mice urine and feces in them. He also didn't care about fixing the ceiling where the rodents eventually broke out.

I'm also positive he low-balled the estimate for things, even if the structure of the house is kept (though, I think,if it is at all possible, the best solution for me would be to have this house razed and rebuilt to my specific details by working with an architect and a reputable construction company because nothing is right and I honestly don't think it can be easily fixed).

I've e-mailed MANY MANY lawyers or used contact forms. So, now, I'm in communication with you as it seems nobody in Lake Charles will actually do anything about this situation and would rather just laugh at me or act like it's a pity and then do nothing else.

Also, just because I'm physically disabled and have PTSD and situation anxiety, it doesn't mean that I'm dumb. Far from it. I was always in advanced classes. I only got two Cs in total in my academic career. I have two Bachelor's degrees with a minor, a Master's degree, and am a researcher by nature (I find it fun to research . . . I've probably researched more things than I can remember).
